

RESULTS OF SYSTEMS INQUIRY

The following chart shows what equipment is used in the 59 institutions which answered the inquiry about language lab systems.

This chart will enable NALLD members to find out quickly where in the country a given system is being used. This should be useful for members who like to exchange information with colleagues who have systems similar to their own or for members who would like to collect first hand information on a given system before adopting it.

The present inquiry is the first one in a series designed to facilitate and encourage the exchange of information and ideas among NALLD members. It was conducted by Professor Emilio De Torre of Queens College, N.Y. who should be thanked here for his devotion to the cause, and congratulated for completing successfully such an onerous task.

The second inquiry in the series, on "holdings," is underway under the direction of Professor Joseph Sheehan of Georgetown University. It will enable members of NALLD to find out which institutions have programs in the less commonly taught languages.

Numbers used in chart identify institutions using the systems. See list below.
